ABOUT THE LITURGY:

Built of Living Stones – Part 1

Considering one of the documents that guide our liturgical worship, let us look at Built of Living Stones: Art, Architect, and Worship, which was promulgated by the United States Conference of Catholic Bishops in November 2000.

Practically, this document was “presented to assist the faithful involved in the building or renovations of churches, chapels, and oratories of the Latin church in the United States. In addition, the document is intended for use by architects, the liturgical consultants and artists, contractors, and other professionals engaged in the design and/or construction of these places of worship” (Built of Living Stones [BLS] 3).

Theologically, the effect that a church building has on the congregation that gathers within it is immense, and that effect is addressed in the document, beginning with the words:

Churches, therefore, must be places suited to sacred celebrations, dignified, and beautiful ... Church buildings and the religious artworks that beautify them are forms of worship themselves and both inspire and reflect the prayer of the community as well as the inner life of grace. Conversely, church buildings and religious artifacts that are trivial, contrived, or lack beauty can detract from the community's liturgy. Architecture and art become the joint work of the Holy Spirit and the local community, that of preparing human hearts to receive God's word and to enter more fully into communion.” (BLS 18)

In the next few weeks, we shall look more deeply into how a church is architecture, art, and environment impact worship and ecclesiology.

The Mystery of the Eucharist in the Life of the Church

By the United States Conference of Catholic Bishops

18. From the very beginning, the Church has believed and celebrated according to the teaching of Jesus himself: Whoever eats my flesh and drinks my blood has eternal life and I will raise him on the last day. For my flesh is true food, and my blood is true drink. Whoever eats my flesh and drinks my blood remains in me and I in him (Jn 6:54-56). It is not “ordinary bread and ordinary drink” that we receive in the Eucharist, but the flesh and blood of Christ, who came to nourish and transform us, to restore our relationship to God and to one another.

19. In the Eucharist, with the eyes of faith we see before us Jesus Christ, who, in the Incarnation became flesh (Jn 1:14) and who in the Paschal Mystery gave himself for us (Ti 2:14), accepting even death on a cross (Phil 2:8). St. John Chrysostom preached that when you see the Body of Christ “set before you [on the altar], say to yourself: Because of this Body I am no longer earth and ashes, no longer a prisoner, but free: because of this I hope for heaven, and to receive the good things therein, immortal life, the portion of angels, [and closeness] with Christ.”
